Classic Fashions Still Preferred Despite Mods

Seldom has a new look for the teen been so widely publicized as the mod fashion, and most apparel manufacturers agree it will be a tremendous influence this autumn.

But marketing executives at Jantzen, Inc., which produces sweaters and sportswear especially for students, believe the early surge of 'way-out modism will subside into a more definite and lasting style. The company's own interpretation of modism is manifested in two areas — one is described as spoof or kookie numbers (a striped "Con Man" sweater with prison number, for instance) and the other European styling such as unique cable treatments or the narrow, French feed stripe.

"Despite all of the noise being made by mod, the bulk of retail sales will continue to be in what's best called the classic sweaters," according to an executive of the firm's menswear division. "Pullovers of lambswool, shetlands and assorted blends in the $12 to $18 range will in fact be stronger than ever. The big difference is in coloring, which has gone to heathens in the coffee and rust shades."

Art Festival Due at Marina

The second annual Festival of Arts at Marina del Rey will open today and be repeated Oct. 9.

In addition to exhibitions of painting, pottery, and crafts, the last day of the event also will feature a concert at the beach front. Musicians will use a huge county bandwagon on a stage for the entertainment.

reign in 100 per cent cotton velour pullovers, which this fall will be selling in a wide variety of neck styles, though the standard "v" and crew should be the most popular.

Supervisors Pay Tribute To Redondo Beach Woman

The memory of Agnes Wright, former Redondo Beach city councilwoman who died last week, was honored by Los Angeles County Supervisor Burton W. Chace.

Supervisors adjourned their meeting in memory of Mrs. Wright, who had been active in civic work and politics for more than 40 years. "Mrs. Wright's contributions to the city of Redondo Beach will not be forgotten soon," Chace said.

Mrs. Wright, of 726 Esplanade, served as councilwoman from 1957 to 1961. She had been honored as Redondo Beach Woman of the Year in 1957.

She moved to Redondo Beach in 1942 when she and her husband, Homer, opened Wright's Sea Food.

Mrs. Wright had been active in many community service and social groups. She was past president of the Redondo Beach Rotary Annex, the American Legion Auxiliary and the Hawthorne Community Hospital.
